Scott M. Guenther is a Member at Adams, Stepner, Woltermann & Dusing, PLLC, and he serves as the firm’s Managing Partner.

Scott is a member of the firm’s Civil Litigation Practice Group and its Private Client Practice Group. He regularly counsels and represents individuals and entities involved in business disputes. Having handled such matters for over seventeen years, Scott recognizes the importance of reaching a quick and efficient resolution of business disputes whenever possible, as well as the importance of being prepared to initiate and aggressively pursue litigation when necessary. His trial experience and determination will benefit you or your company if formal litigation becomes necessary.

Scott regularly represents employers and insurance companies in the defense of workers’ compensation claims. He has handled hundreds, if not thousands, of workers’ compensation claims and is a distinguished speaker and author on this area of the law. In addition to his extensive workers’ compensation practice, Scott is also well versed in other areas of employment law.

As a member of the firm’s Private Client Practice Group, Scott regularly represents individuals who have been injured as a result of work accidents, automobile accidents, and medical negligence. He served for five years as a prosecutor, which gave him a multitude of trial experience and he also represents clients against whom criminal charges have been brought; especially those accused of driving under the influence. During his five years of service as a prosecutor alone, Scott took more cases to jury trial than most attorneys do over the course of their entire career. This invaluable experience honed his skills as a trial lawyer very early in his career.

Scott resides in Edgewood, Kentucky with his wife of eighteen years and three sons. He believes in involvement and service in his community. He previously served for six years as a member of the Edgewood City Council and, during his term, received more votes than any of the other six members on the Edgewood City Council. He is an active member of St. Pius X Parish, where he recently served for four years as president of the Athletic Association and has served on its Parish Council. He is heavily involved in youth sports and coaches his sons in competitive baseball and basketball. He also enjoys fishing and traveling.
