Mary Ann Stewart is a Member at Adams, Stepner, Woltermann & Dusing, PLLC. She practices in the areas of School Law, Municipal Law, Planning and Zoning, Public Employment Law, Contracts, Due Process Hearings, Civil Litigation, Cable Franchise Negotiation, Tribunals, Civil Rights, and Public Health law.

As a senior member of the firm’s Government Practice group, Ms. Stewart specializes in representing all forms of local governments, administrators, and employees. Her clients are varied, and she serves as general counsel and litigation counsel to cities, counties, school districts, public health districts, cable boards, and library boards. Ms. Stewart’s unique blend of litigation and general counsel experience distinguishes her from other colleagues in that she is able to guide her clients through complexities by anticipating and responding to issues before they become insurmountable problems. Clients value Ms. Stewart’s proactive, individualized approach to their needs, her calm demeanor, and ability to critically analyze a situation from the dual viewpoint of in-house legal counsel, and that of an outside litigator.

Ms. Stewart is always responsive to her clients and approachable by her colleagues and other administrators in the community. She is readily available to assist with questions involving public personnel, contract negotiation, procurement, civil liberties, contracts, and school law. She is often asked to serve as a hearing officer for student expulsion hearings, and personnel hearings.

In her private time, Ms. Stewart is active with local community and charitable organizations, and proudly supports and promotes the varied community offerings and interests of her multiple governmental clients. She embraces the belief that the essence of the attorney-client relationship is an equal, and supportive, partnership, with its primary objective being to assist the client’s mission to enhance and enrich the lives of the general public which it serves.
